

Vocabulary That Works

Below are things for you to consider!

Augmentative and Alternative Communication

... The lead professional in this endeavor will typically be the SLP. Others who might be involved include but are not limited to occupational therapists, physical therapists, rehabilitation engineers, special educators, vision specialists, audiologists, and psychologists. Finally, when considering AAC, parents and professionals must remember that there are no prerequisites to AAC use. That is, all individuals should have access to AAC systems or devices that promote effective communication.

<http://www.asha.org/content.aspx?id=8589942192>

Importance of Having an AAC Evaluation

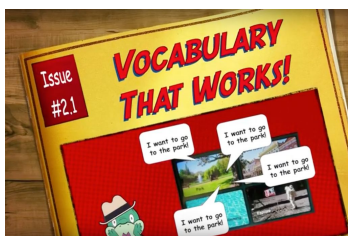

Thoughts on Augmentative and Alternative Communication Assessment
by Gail M. Van Tatenhove, PA, MS, CCC-SLP

<http://www.vantatenhove.com/files/papers/Assessment/ThoughtsOnAACAssessment.pdf>

Augmentative and Alternative Communication Decisions

...it is imperative that the goal of augmentative and alternative communication (AAC) use be the most effective interactive communication possible. Anything less represents a compromise of the individual's human potential.

<https://www.asha.org/public/speech/disorders/CommunicationDecisions/>

Vocabulary That Works

Presentation: Key Principles Involved in Conducting an AAC Assessment

by Jennifer Abruscatti, July 20, 2015

https://prezi.com/ezng_x7c6xqx/key-principles-involved-in-conducting-an-aac-assessment/?webgl=0

Caregiver Guide to Selecting Vocabulary for Children

Jill E Senner, PhD, CCC-SLP

<http://www.talcaac.com/vocab%20selection.pdf>